<td>1.45pm – 2.20pm</td>
<td>PRESENTATION: Getting bananas to Mars: Deliberation done well or engagement gone wrong?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>PRESENTED BY: Chad Foulkes, Director, Liminal by Design</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Let’s throw away the big words of deliberation, democratisation, random selection, participatory democracy and talk about how we (Local Government) can plan with people to bring about better futures. In this session we will pick apart deliberation and you will experience some of the elements of deliberative processes. This deliberative stuff is not new, it began around the same time Australian Local Government roles expanded from being local road authorities (Whitlam Government in the 1970’s), so why is it seen as innovative? The processes have been tried, tested, refined and improved. And yes, they have planned, structured and even scientific methodologies (much more so than community engagement)! So come and find out about the recipes of these processes, how deliberation differs from engagement, what utilising these processes has meant for others and how to prepare for the coming changes to the Local Government Act.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2.20pm – 3.50pm</td>
<td>PRESENTATION AND WORKSHOP: Emotionally Intelligent Relationship Management – Strategic advice and influence with often limited authority</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>PRESENTER: Adam Slonim, Founder, Blended Learning Group and Adjunct Fellow, Victoria University</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Corporate planning requires expertise in many areas such as strategic direction, legislation, performance measures, policy deployment, reporting, service review and continuous improvement. Corporate Planners work horizontally and vertically across the organisation with all managers and levels, reporting finally to the CEO. Successful stakeholder management is integral to providing value add leadership and influence and it requires interacting with different people with different agendas: as a planner, a critical question is how I get my view across and accepted while maintaining healthy and effective relationships?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.50pm – 4.30pm</td>
<td>SERVICE DELIVERY MODELS AROUND THE WORLD</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>In this session you will hear about four different service delivery models, one of which includes a shared Council model, along with other models from around the world.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.30pm – 4.45pm</td>
<td>WRAP UP AND AWARDS CEREMONY</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The winner of the 2018 Corporate Planners Network Award will be announced along with the Delegate Choice Award winner, where you get to choose the worthy recipient Council!</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.45pm – 5.45pm</td>
<td>AFTERNOON TEA, DRINKS, CANAPES AND NETWORKING</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>A great opportunity to celebrate with the award winning Councils and catch up with peers from the sector in a relaxing atmosphere whilst enjoying some refreshments.</td>

Conference Speakers

Jeremy Sharp
Jeremy has worked as a Local Government urban planner in Virginia since 2005, and for the City of Norfolk since 2008. In that time, his work has been recognised multiple times for planning excellence – including three state-wide planning awards. Jeremy has been responsible for bringing several major projects to completion, including, most notably, Norfolk’s 2013 comprehensive plan (plaNorfolk2030), its 2016 sea level rise adaptation strategy (Vision 2100), and its 2018 zoning ordinance rewrite. Jeremy holds a Bachelor in Urban Affairs and a Master in Urban and Regional Planning from Virginia Tech.

Warren Dean
Warren heads the data analytics function at Casey City Council. He has more than 10 years experience in analytics previously working at the Department of Education and Training and the Department of Justice and Regulation. Warren has a passion for using data to teach and empower by using analytics and simple visualisations to enable data-driven results. His role involves educating, upskilling and encouraging staff to leverage the value of data so that the Council can provide effective services to the community. Warren is a certified Data Science Associate through Dell EMC and recently worked on a project that was the recipient of the Victorian iAward for Artificial Intelligence or Machine Learning Innovation of the Year.

Sam Dureau
Sam has 15 years experience in strategy, planning, change management, learning and development and culture management in both the public and private sectors. She has the qualifications to back up that experience, including a Bachelor of Arts, Master of Business Administration, Diploma of Project Management, Certificate IV in Training & Assessment and Certifications from the International Association Public Participation (IAP2) and the Australian Institute of Company Directors. She is the Managing Director of sam-i-am consulting and is currently undertaking a PhD by research on the topic of Accountability in the Public Sector. Sam is a change maker and an intrapreneur and is interested in helping organisations and individuals reach their full potential.

Chad Foulkes
Chad has been at the forefront of deliberative practices and community engagement for a decade. He has delivered and participated in numerous deliberative firsts including commissioning and designing the first citizen’s jury run by Local Government in Victoria back in 2007 while working at Surf Coast Shire. He also co-delivered the first participatory budgeting exercise run by Darebin City Council. Chad has won three IAP2 awards as part of a team and has been highly commended for others. He has held a number of academic appointments and lectures in Deakin University’s postgraduate unit in Community Consultation and Public Participation. He has published six peer referee journal articles and thrives on the challenge of bringing a citizen voice or choice to decision making.

Adam Slonim
Adam is the founder of Blended Learning Group which assists organisations with Leadership through Emotional Intelligence, Communicating with Purpose, and Sales Capability. He is accredited to the Daniel Goleman Emotional & Social Competence methodology and has coached more than 225 Managers in EI and administered over 2900 EI 360 Surveys. Adam spent some years at a global consulting firm specialising in human communication. He is also one of the few accredited Mercuri International Australian consultants – one of the largest sales training companies in the world and is also accredited in the Geier personality development methodology. Adam was also the first Australian accredited in the Breakthrough to Peak Performance motivation program. As an accredited motivation specialist, he designs and delivers unique change management consulting and training programs that tap high performance drive. Adam is also an accredited coach, and specialises in coaching as a means of turning individual and team potential into high performance.
